

DAY PAST WHEN BRUTE FORCE DIRECTS POLICY OF NATIONS

Chicago, May 4.—"We have met in this second national peace congress in the interests not of an unrealizable dream, but of a great already triumphing reform," said Dr. Benjamin F. Trueblood, secretary of the American Peace society, in yesterday afternoon's session of the second national peace conference. "The peace movement has passed its theoretical period. It is far along toward the completion of its practical stage," continued the speaker.

"The men and women, now a great host, who believe that the day is past when blind brute force should direct the policies of nations and preside at the settlement of their differences, are now thoroughly organized. A hundred years ago there was not a society in existence organized to promote appeal to the forum of reason and right in the adjustment of international controversies. Today there are more than 500, nearly every important nation having its group of peace organizations." Dr. Trueblood mentioned some of these and told of the work they are doing. Continuing, he said:

"It is this far-flung pacific public sentiment of the world, growing constantly, crossing all boundary lines, disregarding all language barriers, organized and having its definite well-digested program, that constitutes the real strength and the promise of the peace movement. Out of this has come all the rest—the limitation and restriction of war, the splendid triumphs of arbitration, the Hague conferences, the international court of arbitration, the beginnings of a world parliament and of a supreme court of the nations. It is on this intelligent organized public sentiment, to which governments are compelled to listen, that we must still rely absolutely for the accomplishment of what yet remains to be done to bring the nations to sane and national relations to each other and to relieve them from the torturing nightmare of militarism, with which they are still obsessed."

"The position which the peace movement has reached is no less distinctly determined by the practical attainments of arbitration. Within the past 20 years so rapid has been the triumphs of arbitration that more than 100 international differences have been disposed of by this means, or between five and six a year for the whole twenty years. Arbitration is no longer an experiment. It is the settled practice of the nations. A score of disputes today go naturally to arbitration where one gives rise even to talk of war."

"The first Hague conference, ten years ago, gave us the permanent international court of arbitration, which has now been in successful operation for about eight years and disposed of several important controversies. This court was strengthened and improved by the second Hague conference two years ago, and by the admission of the South and Central American states to it has become the arbitration court, not of the twenty-six powers that gathered at The Hague in 1899, but of the entire world. This tribunal is now taking practically all the international differences not adjustable by diplomacy. Within a year there have been referred to it the Casa-Blanca dispute between France and Germany, the fisheries controversy between this country and Great Britain, certain questions in controversy between our government and Venezuela, and a dispute between Norway and Sweden."

"Within less than six years more than 80 treaties of obligatory arbitration, stipulating reference to the Hague court of all questions of a judicial order and those arising in the interpretation of treaties, have been concluded between nations in pairs, 23 of which were negotiated the past year by our distinguished ex-Secretary of State Root, and ratified by both the president and senate. Arbitration has won its case. There remains, in fact, but one further step in its development, and that is the conclusion of a general treaty of obligatory arbitration to be signed by all the nations together, stipulating the reference to the Hague court of all international differences not capable of solution by diplomacy. A treaty of this order, limited somewhat in scope, came much nearer adoption at the second Hague conference than is usually known. Thirty-five of the forty-four delegations voted for it, and only five against it, a vote of seven to one, or by the populations of the nations represented, of more than seven to one, leaving out of account the four powers that abstained from voting and tacitly gave their consent to the proposed convention."

"This record made by arbitration is unsurpassed, probably unparalleled, by any other chapter of the history of the progress of civilization during the last hundred years, and before long the wise and learned historians, who have heretofore so largely estimated history by its feuds and battles and slaughters, will find it out."

Dr. Trueblood discussed the significance of some of the special conventions adopted by the second Hague conference which exclude warlike operations entirely from certain fields and make war in general much more difficult and less likely to occur at all.

As to the important work of the conferences, the speaker said: "The first Hague conference gave us the permanent international court of arbitration, to which the powers represented finally became parties by ratification of the convention. This court has now for eight years been in successful operation, and not less than four controversies have been referred to it during the past year. The second Hague conference enlarged and strengthened the convention under which this court was set up, and made the court the tribunal, not of the powers already represented, but of all the nations of the world. Though reference of disputes to this tribunal is still in general voluntary, a majority of the important nations have already by special treaties with each other in pairs, pledged themselves to refer all disputes of a judicial order and those arising in the interpretation of treaties to its jurisdiction. It is reasonable to believe, therefore, that we have arrived at a stage in the development of our movement when there already exists among the nations a substitute for war practically, if not theoretically, adequate for the adjustment of all their disputes, without resort to force, in a way to conserve the honor and vital interests of the separate governments."

"Another step of still greater moment was taken by the second Hague conference in the direction of providing a perfect substitute for force in the settlement of international differences. It voted without a dissenting delegation for the principle of an international court of arbitral justice, with judges always in service, and holding regular sessions." The speaker said it is safe to assume that the difficulty in regard to the selection of the judges will be speedily solved, and that we shall have in a comparatively short time the august tribunal which will render war between the powers of the world scarcely thinkable. He continued:

"The high water mark of the work of the second Hague conference was reached in its action in regard to future meetings of the conferences. The principle of periodic meetings of the conference hereafter was approved without a dissenting voice. The date even of the third conference was fixed and the governments urged to appoint at least two years in advance an international commission to prepare the program of the meeting. This action means, if approved by the several powers, as it undoubtedly will be,

ALCOHOL IN SICKNESS.

At one of the London public hospitals a special point is made of giving alcohol to the patients as rarely and sparingly as possible; and each time that one of the physicians does so he submits a special entry of the reasons that actuated him. In the thirty-two years of the existence of the hospital alcohol has only been given seventy-one times. The cases received are exactly like those received by all the other hospitals. For 1904 they numbered 1337 in-patients only. The death-rate among these was 7.3 per cent. For the same year the average death-rate among the other London public hospitals was 9.1 per cent. Therefore the use of alcohol in sickness is not to be regarded as a necessity. Although most physicians prescribe alcohol in solution with drugs for their patients—there was one physician of national reputation who did not believe in using alcohol. Many years ago when Dr. R. V. Pierce decided to put up his valuable "Prescription" for the diseases of women in a "ready to use" form—he used as a solvent and preservative chemically pure glycerine of proper strength, which is a better solvent and preservative of the active medicinal principles residing in most of our indigenous or native plants than is alcohol. Besides being entirely harmless, possesses intrinsic medicinal properties, of great value.

No woman who is suffering from inflammation, from the pains and drains incident to womanhood can afford to be without Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. An honest medicine which has the largest number of cures to its credit and a deserved popularity for two score years all over the United States. Dr. Pierce tells you just what is contained in his "Favorite Prescription."

ITS INGREDIENTS ARE:

Golden Seal root (Hydrastis Canadensis), Lady's Slipper root (Cypripedium Pubescens), Black Cohosh root (Cimicifuga Racemosa), Unicorn root (Hemionias Dioica), Blue Cohosh root (Caulophyllum Thalictrifolius), Chemically Pure Glycerine.

Among the prominent medical men of the country who recommend the above ingredients as superior remedies for nervous conditions depending upon disorders of the womanly system and for the cure of those catarrhal conditions in the affected parts are: Edwin M. Hale, M. D., Professor of Materia Medica, at Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., Author of the American Dispensary, Woman and her Diseases; Professor John M. Scudder, Doctors Hale, Ives, Wood, Bartholow and others. Address a postal card to Dr. Pierce for a complete treatise on the subject—sent to you without cost.

DR. PIERCE'S PLEASANT PELLETS cure biliousness, sick and bilious headache, dizziness, constiveness, or constipation of the bowels, loss of appetite, coated tongue, sour stomach, windy belchings, "heartburn," pain and distress after eating, and kindred derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels.

Persons who are subject to any of these troubles should never be without a vial of the "Pleasant Pellets" hand. In proof of their superior excellence it can truthfully be said that they are always adopted as a household remedy after the first trial.

One little "Pellet" is a laxative, two are cathartic. They regulate, invigorate and cleanse the liver, stomach and bowels. As a "dinner pill," to promote digestion, take one each day. To relieve the distress arising from over-eating, nothing equals one of these little "Pellets." They're tiny, sugar-coated, anti-bilious granules, scarcely larger than mustard seeds.

HEALTH AND HAPPINESS.

How to live in health and happiness is the general theme of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. that we are to have hereafter regular meetings of a world conference. The powers of the conference, will at first be only advisory, but in the very nature of the case its conclusions and recommendations will be very largely adopted, and in this way it will, from the very start, be substantially a legislative world assembly. Its powers will naturally grow and be extended. Here we reach the real position which the peace movement has attained. The promise, therefore, is very large for the years just before us; for when the nations meet representatively at regular periods, and men of the highest ability and experience discuss in a friendly and frank way all of the common problems of the world, the days of war will be numbered, the great armaments which now burden and distract humanity will tumble to pieces, and the era of universal and perpetual peace will have begun. It takes no large vision to see this great consummation realized at no distant time."

EZRA MEEKER TO HAVE PIONEER FARM AT SEATTLE EXPOSITION

Seattle, Wash., May 4.—Two years ago Ezra Meeker, a pioneer of Oregon and Washington, demonstrated the possibility of a transcontinental highway by hitching two oxen to a "prairie schooner" of the olden days, and driving them from Seattle to New York city and return over what was known as the "Oregon Trail." In the days when men fared into the west by what means they could. His journey was watched with interest by every section of the country and, when he "whacked" his oxen into the national capital, on the return trip, President Roosevelt ran out of the White house to greet him and tell him of the great good that his remarkable trip had worked in the cause of more and better roads the country over.

Mr. Meeker was then 72 years of age, but hardly enough to make the long journey, and upon his return, to keep up his campaign for a "Camino Real," or king's highway across the continent.

Now he is making use of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition to serve the same purpose. On the "Pay Streak," which is the amusement way of Seattle's world's fair, he has laid out several acres of the forest covered campus in trails and vistas. He has erected pioneer log cabins and built waterfalls. He has laid out water courses and in other ways reproduced in miniature the famous trail over which he first entered the great northwest. He has the same ox-team he drove across the continent and others as well and the visitor to the exposition, when he finds his way to the Pay Streak will be taken "over the summit of the Cascades, over the 'three notched legs' down the descent and through the narrow defile," which are told of in the history of Lewis and Clark, who first blazed the way.

In the log cabins he will find the entertainment and hospitality of the days of '49 and in the woods he will find rustic seats and benches where families may discuss the picnic luncheons they may bring with them.

Altogether it is a realistic bit from the pioneer days, the traces of which are so rapidly disappearing from the west.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.
